How is sickness notified?	You inform your employer and submit the medical certificate, in accordance with the regulations of your employer. If the incapacity for work continues for a longer period, elipsLife must be sent a medical certificate once a month.
What are the required contents of the medical certificate?	The medical certificate must be valid until a specific date. The remark "until further notice" cannot be accepted. The end date may not be more than four weeks into the future. A medical certificate may be issued retroactively to a maximum of three days.
What happens then?	Your employer will inform elipsLife of the incapacity for work by way of a written notification. The medical certificate will also be forwarded to us. elipsLife reviews the medical grounds for the incapacity for work in order to determine its obligation to provide benefits. A report containing all the relevant information is requested from the doctor providing treatment.
What are your obligations when you consult a doctor?	If incapacity for work is likely to lead to the payment of insurance benefits, specialist medical treatment should be sought as soon as possible. The insured person must comply with the instructions of the doctor. If required, the insured person must submit to a medical examination by doctors instructed by elipsLife. elipsLife will bear the costs for such examinations.
What are the obligations with regard to the competent authorities?	The insured person is obliged to inform the competent authorities of any claim for benefits under the accident insurance law (UVG), the disability insurance law (IVG) or the income compensation law (EOG) that has not yet been cleared up.

If the incapacity for work lasts for longer than four months, the benefits payable by the Federal Disability Insurance must be reviewed. The Federal Disability Insurance will help you with the process of your reintegration into professional life or review the payment of any pension that may be due. elipsLife will provide you with the necessary application forms. This process is governed by the disability insurance law.

What else must the insured person do?

Generally, the insured person must do everything that can contribute to a reduction in benefits. An insured person who is expected to remain fully or partially unable to exercise his/her original profession is obliged to apply his/her remaining earning capacity in another profession or to different tasks. If necessary, he/she must report to the unemployment insurance. If required, elipsLife can set the insured person a deadline for adjusting his/her previous activities or for changing jobs or professions.

What applies abroad and while you are on vacation?

If an insured who is unable to work and who receives benefits from elipsLife travels abroad without the prior written consent of elipsLife, he/she will not be entitled to any benefits during his/her sojourn abroad. elipsLife must be informed at least four weeks in advance of any periods spent abroad, e.g. vacation in the case of sickness.
